

man took, but other than at the point mentioned were beaten off with extremely heavy losses.

The text of to-day's Army Headquarters statement is as follows: "Lively artillery activity continued yesterday north and south of Lane."

"On the left bank of the Meuse the French brought forward considerable forces in the evening for an attack on Dead Man Hill and Caurettes Height. Southeast of Dead Man Hill the French obtained a foothold in our first line trenches over an extent of 400 metres. Otherwise their repeated assaults were repulsed with the heaviest losses."

"On the right bank of the Meuse the artillery duels continue."

"East of Ober-Sert (southwest of Altkirch), a German reconnoitering detachment penetrated into French positions over a width of about 250 metres and a depth of about 350 metres and returned with booty and prisoners."

"A British biplane was brought down west of Cambrai in an aerial battle. The occupants, who were officers, were wounded and taken prisoner."

According to a special correspondent at the Verdun front, quoted today by the Overseas News Agency, the capture of Cumieres Village from the French has resulted in the establishment of direct communication between the German positions east and west of the Meuse, making impossible the flanking fire which previously had menaced the German line.

The correspondent points out that Cumieres Wood, north of the village, had been captured by the Germans early in the month, and that now they have continued their thrust southward, which could not be done without serious sacrifices until after the heights to the west had been conquered.

Some reports say the French are preparing to surrender Hill 304.

Several French positions on the summit, torn by the pounding fire of German guns, already have been evacuated. The next general assault on the position probably will bring it into the hands of the Germans.

From Haucourt eastward to the Meuse the German front is pressing steadily southward in daily "nibbles" at the French line. The French are offering desperately tenacious resistance, but are steadily falling back upon the Charnay line. The most furious French counter-attacks, delivered at heavy sacrifices in men, have resulted in only temporary successes, the Germans pressing on after each fresh check.

The French line has been stripped of reserves brought up for the defense of Verdun. Recent concentrations of troops behind the Anglo-French front indicate that the British are preparing to take over another stretch of French front, releasing French troops for service at Verdun.

German military critics, commenting on France's dire need of more men for the defense of her great fortresses, asked to-day what has become of the "great Russian army" which was to have halted the German advance on the fortresses. It is authoritatively stated here that not a single one of the few thousand Russians reported to have been landed at Marseilles has been in action on the western front.
